“ I knew Rebecca by way of a gardening website: Landspro. I became a daylily 'fan' ;-) because of Rebecca. I bought many daylilies from her-some her own one of a kind crosses. Today I was weeding and came across white plastic pieces that she would send along as name tags for them. I thought about her and googled. I see that her birthday is in 3 days. Whether it was rejuvenating dying plants from her job at WM ,or caring for her cats or the cat colony at WM, she was a kind caring person. She spoke her mind and I imagine was an advocate. She loved her family and I even have a daylily cross(White Temptation x Siloam Ury Winniford) that she created and named 'Christina' who is believe is her daughter. Rebecca's memory lives on with me as does the secret of what she used as a marker on her name tags because all of mine wear off- thank you Rebecca for the smiles and warm memories. (Yes, Rebecca, I remember what you told me-make a map!). Love you special lady!-Cathy

“ This sun-soaked, leather-footed and powerful woman was spotted loitering in my alley. Scissors and envelopes in hand, she was poaching columbine seed pods. She pronounced the word mind with a second, lower syllable. "I didn't think you would mind." An hour later she ambled home. She left me with a better understanding of my perennials and weeds. Just as she collected seeds, she collected cats and people. Thanks, Becky.

My gardening friend who helped me put new things in this year from her own hybrids. I appreciated that though did not realise she was so seriously ill. Neither she nor I would have stopped if we knew anyway, we were and are gardeners, that never stops!

Just heart-wrenching news of Rebecca. So sorry to hear about your loss. I never got to meet her, but we shared many things of common interest, and I really thought a lot of her. So sad. At least she is out of pain. I'll remember her by her smile and laughter.
